Simply put, straight teeth are easier to clean. Crooked and crowded teeth make it hard to brush properly and get all those nooks and crannies with the floss. And when food gets stuck where the sun don't shine, nasty bacteria can grow, result in swollen gums, lead to bad breath, cause cavities and maybe even spur on an infection.

Poorly positioned teeth make routine dental care more difficult, which can cause tooth decay and periodontal disease. A malocclusion can interfere with your ability to eat and speak properly. It may also cause added wear on tooth enamel, headaches, and jaw or ear pain. Orthodontic treatments can potentially eliminate or prevent these problems.

Um you can't do it yourself! Some orthodontist will give you this roof brace which you can wear for several months and gradually it stretches the tooth of your mouth to allow more room for your teeth to sit in! Its not as painful as it sounds trust me! I had it! And it's a lot nicer than the alternative if having teeth out! Just takes a bit longer!
